

Center for Prevention Programs and Partnerships

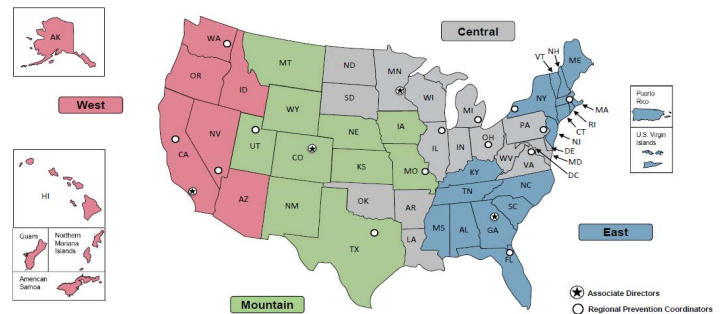

CP3 strengthens our country's ability to prevent targeted violence and terrorism nationwide through funding, training, increased public awareness, and partnerships across every level of government, the private sector, and in local communities.

What is CP3's approach to targeted violence and terrorism prevention?

The U.S. Department of Homeland Security's (DHS) Center for Prevention Programs and Partnerships (CP3) uses a public health-informed approach to targeted violence and terrorism prevention. Our efforts focus on creating evidence-based prevention resources and helping prevention providers build protective factors at the individual, family, and community levels to decrease the risk of targeted violence, hate crime, and terrorism. The focus of a public health-informed approach is on the health, safety, and well-being of entire populations.

Field Operations

CP3's Regional Prevention Coordinators (RPCs) provide training and consultation to community members and institutions that have the relevant skills to assist in violence prevention in order to establish and expand local prevention programs that reduce the risks of targeted violence and terrorism.

Targeted Violence and Terrorism Prevention (TVTP) Grant Program

CP3 partners with DHS's Federal Emergency Management Agency to administer the TVTP Grant Program on an annual basis. By investing more than $50 million in state, local, tribal and territorial governments, nonprofit organizations, and academic programs and initiatives across the nation over the past three years, this grants program has enabled innovative pilot programs to build on the strengths of individuals, families, communities and American society writ large to decrease the likelihood of targeted violence and terrorism.

Prevention Resource Finder

In March 2023, the US Government announced the launch of PreventionResourceFinder.gov, a single access point to help communities find federal resources they need to prevent targeted violence and terrorism. Featuring nearly 100 resources from 17 federal partners, the site offers tools for building local support networks so communities can help people who are moving toward violence before harm occurs.
