LEP Resource Guide for Law Enforcement

Federal law requires law enforcement agencies that receive federal financial assistance to take reasonable steps to provide meaningful access to persons with limited English proficiency (LEP).

Both the U.S. Department of Justice (http://go.usa.gov/4KRe) and U.S. Department of Homeland Security (http://go.usa.gov/4Knx) provide guidance for funding recipients on the obligation to provide meaningful access to LEP individuals.

The following provides guidance on strategies for your agency to ensure language access, resources for obtaining language services, and possible funding sources for your agency.

<th>TACTICS AND TIPS</th>

| Know how to determine limited English proficiency. It’s not always simple, and individuals can be limited English proficient for certain purposes but not for others. | - LEP individuals may be competent in English for speaking or understanding but not for reading or writing. LEP individuals may have sufficient English language skills to communicate basic information, such as name and address, but insufficient skills to communicate detailed information such as eyewitness accounts, medical information, etc.
- Similarly, LEP designations are context-specific: an individual may possess sufficient English language skills to function in one setting (e.g., social), but not in other situations (e.g., legal, courthouse, witness statements).
- Do not make assumptions about an individual’s primary language. For example, many persons from Mexico do not speak Spanish, but rather an indigenous language.
- Utilize “I Speak” materials to assist you in identifying the language spoken by the LEP person. |
| Determine the languages spoken in your jurisdiction. | - Obtain demographic data from your agency or other local or federal sources, including school district and census data.
- Reach out to community organizations that serve LEP persons to learn more about specific language needs of the community and services that may be available. |
| Collect data. Record the type of contact, the language encountered, as well as of the type of assistance rendered. | - Maintaining such data helps your office to understand who it serves, and potentially helps to justify funding requests. |
| Make a plan. Undergo a planning process to develop a language access policy and protocol guidance | - Though there is no one size fits all approach, examples include the DOJ language access plan, available at http://www.justice.gov/open/language-access-plan.pdf. |
| for personnel to follow when interacting with LEP individuals. | Other examples are available on http://www.LEP.gov.
- Include members of the community in the planning process.
- Educate all agency personnel about language access and how to utilize agency language assistance services including how to work with an interpreter.
- Train employees routinely.
- Reassess the plan periodically, and whenever there are demographic shifts. |
|---|---|
| Utilize bilingual personnel. | - Recruit bilingual personnel and offer a base pay increase for staff who pass a proficiency exam.
- Assess the language skills of bilingual personnel and provide ongoing training on the skills and ethics associated with interpretation. For example, professional interpreters follow a canon of ethics that requires them to interpret accurately, impartially, maintain confidentiality, and refrain from embellishing, among other things.
- Periodic assessment of language ability should be mandatory if bilingual personnel engage in high stakes interactions (i.e., conducting investigations, executing warrants, conducting arrests, providing advice of rights/Miranda warnings, conducting booking, interrogations, witness interviews, etc., as opposed to providing directions).
- Provide bilingual personnel with police interpreter training. Encourage officers and civilian staff to use their language skills in accordance with the principles above with regard to assessment of language skills and training.
- Deploy bilingual personnel to areas with high numbers of LEP residents.
- Use bilingual civilian staff to conduct community outreach and build relationships between your department and immigrant and LEP residents.
- Avoid the use of friends and family members of the LEP individual |
| Work with other agencies. | - Pool resources and leverage assets with other agencies and services in your city or county.
- Find out what other agencies are doing. |
| Include telephonic interpretation. | - Provide information on telephonic interpretation, including its use for a variety of communication needs: from witness interviews, to interviewing LEP motorists, and in many other types of investigative scenarios. The officer need only have a portable |
phone (cell phone) with a speakerphone. Officers should have the telephonic interpretation number on speed dial, and have ready access to your agency’s assigned access code. (Telephonic interpretation is not necessarily expensive. A 10 minute conversation can cost less than $10.)

| Translate signage and documents. | • Translate signage and documents that communicate vital information to the public into the most prevalent languages spoken by LEP community members.
• Notify the public about your agency’s language access policy and language assistance resources. |
